

Faculty of Health and Behavioural Science

Consumer and Community Involvement in Research Award

2023 Nomination Guidelines

Value: $3000

The Consumer and Community Involvement in Research Award recognises outstanding partnerships between HaBS researchers and people with lived experience, in the research process. The award will recognise a team, inclusive of HaBS researchers, professional staff and consumers/community members, who exemplify the potential of consumer and community involvement to maximise the impact of research. Together, the team will have created an inclusive environment in which an authentic partnership is flourishing.

Either self-nominations or other nominations will be considered, but all nominations must be of teams (not individuals).

Eligibility:

Team may include both academic and professional staff and must be comprised of:

- A lead applicant that holds at least a 0.5 FTE paid appointment within the Faculty of Health and Behavioural Sciences. The position must be a continuing position or for at least three years (may include a series of short appointments), and
- at least one consumer/community member.

Applicants should demonstrate:

- Outstanding commitment to involving consumers and community members in all phases of the research cycle and creating an inclusive environment
- Potential to make a significant contribution to ensuring research produces benefits for the wider community

A two-page CV for each applicant must be attached to the application as a single PDF.
